With the NCN returning to politics, questions rise about the fight for land and Valoria’s goals. As Dwayne stated, “The NCN, under new leadership, will be a proud one of few independent nations and does not have the right to interfere with Valorian affairs.” The NCN won’t threaten Valoria in anyway.

Regarding defense, new weapons are going to be used in war. Dwayne commented, “Valoria doesn’t need weapons or defenses, it needs people to hold the guns. People with experience.” He explained that Valoria’s strength should be in its trained people, not just its weapons. He also mentioned, “Valoria is very ready” showing confidence in current defenses. The return of Rose in Deyvooss, combined with the NCN’s comeback, has sparked interest in northern relations. Dwayne stated, “Rose is just a builder at the moment and the NCN will most likely end up a strong ally of Valoria in the near future.” He believes relations will improve in the coming month.

On government structure, Dwayne criticized recent decisions: “Democracy would have been a better option, especially with what is to come.” He also commented on the Lord of Alterhaven’s fixed position, and suggested that some parts of the bureaucracy hold too much power compared to elected leaders. Regarding international partnerships, Dwayne said, “The only nation to have independence is Galena. I think Valoria has more power than Galena.” On neutrality, he stated, “Valorian neutrality should be like the waves, it changes with the wind,” suggesting flexibility is key.

“Trade and Land Are Key,’ Dwayne on Valoria’s Economy”

Valoria’s business has struggled, especially after Valorka stopped selling. Dwayne explained, “Valorian business is low because a certain man does not have a position of power, for now. Trade is a thing only some political minds hold dear.” When asked about mistakes in government decisions, he said, “Valoria not being an independent nation...you have to be free of control.” He emphasized the importance of political freedom for long-term success.

Dwayne also addressed public communication: “Just more news, as long as the news isn’t fake.” Looking to the future, Dwayne urged bold military and political plans: “A month ago I would have told you to flatter mine kid until he gives you more land but now...you and Valoria should look to greater horizons.” He believes Valoria should aim for power and influence, not just survival.
